

WEAPONIZED COMFORT

A Series by Desmond "Biger Gumba" Devine
Title suggested by Aidan Lo

INSPIRATION

- The primary inspiration for everything
- Takes something extremely familiar (door/handle) and merges it with something dangerous (knife).
- I would attempt to recreate this in my own pieces.

INSPIRATION

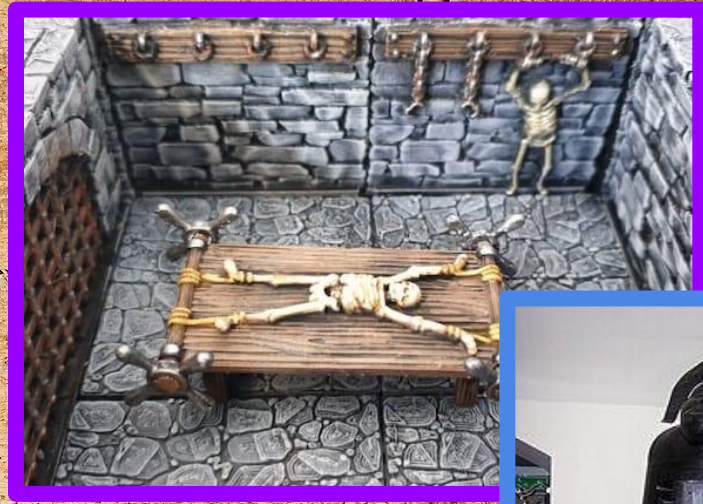

- Example seen in class that I recalled as inspiration.
- Merges the familiar with the unfamiliar- not necessarily with something dangerous but something possibly unsettling.

HISTORICAL EXEMPLAR

- Torture and execution devices: Cruel and Unusual applications of familiar objects?
- These would go from being known as terrifying, twisted schematics to unique objects and iconic in their own right.
- ~~Could I design my own~~ torture mechanisms?

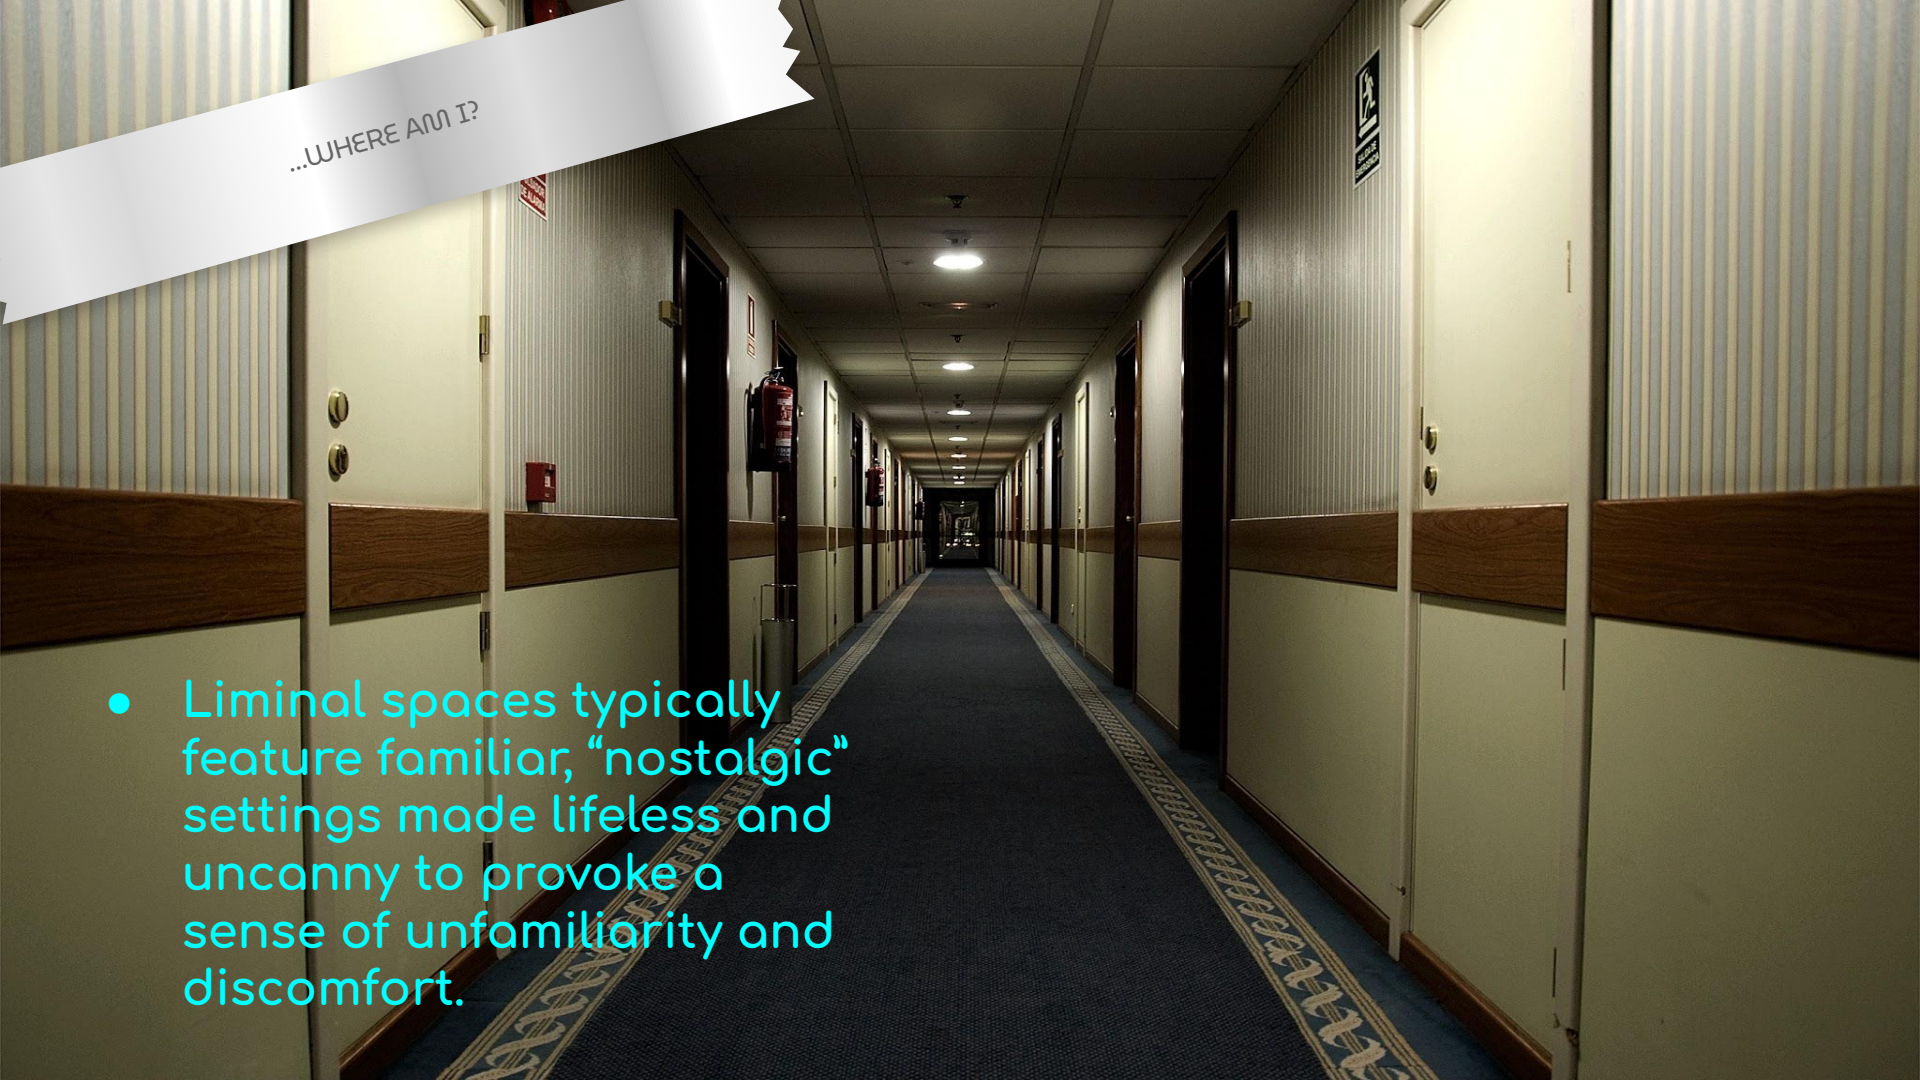

...WHERE AM I?

- Liminal spaces typically feature familiar, “nostalgic” settings made lifeless and uncanny to provoke a sense of unfamiliarity and discomfort.

AND NOW, A WORD FROM OUR SPONSOR!

Introducing my very own Brand Name!

Toys, toiletries, decor, and more... "WE'VE HAVE IT ALL!"

But what are they REALLY up to?

- One week in the future, amidst rapid technological growth and political strain, the Biger Gumba's corporation is founded as a manufacturer of Kitchenware.
- 5 years in the future, Biger Gumba's becomes the leading brand in Furnishing shortly after the release of the first Fortune 500 list to be comprised entirely of entities which openly use AI.
- 6 years in the future, a global military conflict ensues, leading to multiple nations installing AI-Powered Mass Surveillance systems to combat Sedition. The Biger Gumba's brand becomes a government supplier of these systems.
- 15 years in the future, the CEO of Biger Gumba's is elected Head Administrator of the UN and enacts an initiative to reapportion land across the remaining nations of the world.
- 18 years in the future, OSHA among other regulatory organizations are disbanded to increase worker productivity. Biger Gumba's launches a new line of products that seek to normalize pain and discomfort during a record period of working class dissent.
- 20 years in the future, the legal definitions of weeks, months, and years are altered to maximize worker productivity. This historical overview reflects these changes.

The background features a light cream-colored surface with a delicate, repeating floral pattern in a muted pink or rose color. A wide, diagonal border of intricate red lace runs from the top-left to the bottom-right, framing the central text.

*Let's have a Look at

how bad could it be?

First Product: Cactus Bear

- Similarly to how the design of the Knife Handle works against its purpose, this Stuffed Animal weaponizes comfort by poking you if you attempt cuddling it.
- This isn't just a Teddy Bear– it's a Twisted Creation that blurs the line between safety and chaos.
- Design Process - The bear was made simply by asking SuperCraft to add spikes + smile, then I later turned it into a full product as seen here.

Second Product: “Eternal Value” Toilet Paper

- Toilet Paper is essential to maintaining basic hygiene, therefore weaponizing it makes pain a part of daily life as well.
- I’ve not just generated Toilet Paper– I’ve created a Unique Restroom Experience that wipes off more than just waste.
- Design Process - I first generated a six pack of regular toilet paper before designing a spiky sandpaper to add on it. I then conceived the Brand Logo and added it to the packaging.

Third Product: Mouse Trap Geta

- My next goal was to weaponize the regular clothing that is engineered to be comfortable and aesthetically-pleasing.
- This isn't just a Sandal– it's a continuation of a bad joke to create an immersive presentation experience.
- The board for this product included the most reference images as Supercraft didn't really know what Wooden Mousetraps or Geta were.

Fourth Product: Sulfur Wipes

- I decided to not make something spiky/piercing for once and fuse something used to cleanse with acid which burns and corrodes.
- This is just a Cleaning Product. It's a bit too good at its job, however.
- In an attempt to make a commercial for the product, I created the basis for the “Medium” object.

The ones that DIDN'T make the cut

Biger Gumba's attempted to branch into culinary products but Supercraft didn't approve of the idea of Razor Blade Cereal. Gee, I wonder why...

One product I conceived but never got the chance to generate was a computer made of Radioactive Material.

I attempted to add an adhesive coating to the Toilet Paper to improve its long-lasting nature, but the results turned out a little too unorthodox.

YOUR HOME IN 2046

THE WORLD IN 2046

But what did I learn from all this?

- SuperCraft and other AI platforms aren't really yours and have restrictions given by third party developers.
- The everyday objects and devices available to us can be harmful to our mental and physical wellbeing, but not explicitly so.
- Humans desire stimulation even if certain triggers create toxic habits.
- Bad ideas can become commonplace if enough people are deceived into accepting them as good.

 Craft

add a bunch of cactus spines to the bear and give it realistic teeth in a sadistic grin

   1x

 Craft

Turn the bear into a product, put it in a cardboard with logo: "BIGGER DUMBA!" on the side

 Craft

Replace "The Spicy Snuggles Bear" with
"The Spiky Snuggles Bear"

 Craft

Give the bear glowing bulging red eyes and a long tongue protruding out of its mouth and replace the text with "THE FREAKY DRINKABLE BEAR" in curved red font

Craft

Create a pair of Delta sandals but with wiring similar to a mouse trap as the straps.

Craft

Make the black straps thin brass wires.

Craft

Put this in a box with labeling (leave the phone number from inside).

Craft

Remove the text "Caution: Hot Base Trap" and replace with "Batteries, Obvious Not Included".

Craft

Replace the text with a design that says "Bigger Gumbas" and make the box more colorful.

Craft

Replace the text "Bigger Gumbas" with "Made with Spices Cleveland, Ohio".
